WHAT PERSONAL DATA IS BEING COLLECTED FOR OUR ASSIGNMENTS AND WHY?

Why?	Grounds?	What?
We collect or receive our customers personal data which are necessary <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - to open and manage an assignment - to identify customers and to fulfill and comply with our statutory duties regarding anti money laundering provisions - to perform a conflict of interest review 	The ground for processing personal data is our legitimate interest to provide services to our customers, and our obligation to fulfil the requirements set forth in binding provisions	We need a lot of information to carry out assignments. These include, among others, the name, address, phone number, date of birth, nationality, ID, company number and possibly other types of data of the customer that may be necessary in order to produce our services. In addition, in order to fulfill and to comply with our statutory duties regarding the anti money laundering provisions, we need to obtain information e.g. on the customers' representative, beneficial owners, the nature and extent of the customers' business as well as information whether there are politically exposed persons involved. To fulfill and comply with the statutory duties the personal data given can be supplemented and confirmed by information retrieved from other sources, such as registers held by authorities and publicly available search engines. Other types of data are assignment-specific. We may for example have to use sensitive information, such as criminal records or specific information of your bank account whilst representing you. If other persons, such as employees', personal data is

		being processed during the assignment, there shall be a reason for processing. You shall make sure that you will not provide us with personal data that is unnecessary for the carrying out of the assignment. It may for example be necessary to process a listing of the employees' salaries, but it is to be noted that in this case data concerning the employees' union membership may be unnecessary.
